

LONDON

General: Back in the early 20th century, brick surfaces were shaded with a variety of colours. This was a result of imperfections in glazes and unstable kiln temperatures. This traditional appeal has now been replicated with craftsmanship techniques, to produce a brick format porcelain stoneware with a genuine character. Simple to install for both new builds and renovations.

Applications: Commercial & residential internal & external floors & walls, including facades wall features especially interesting for external and slip resistant floors and pathways.
